Open personalised curricula

Education is not known for its innovativeness. In the majority of situations, it's clinging to values despite the fact that these are becoming obsolete by social and technological changes. So, developing students in this ever-changing world is becoming a real challenge. How can we create a system where every learner gets a personal curriculum with tailored didactics and so creating a situation, we're every learning gets to the place where he or she belongs?

Changes in technology are creating a situation which opens up new possibilities to approach teaching, coaching and learning. The story of how, granting ownership, trust and safety in a Freaky Friday, strength-based approach creates a new setting for personalized learning is the main focal point for this keynote. Students create their own learning goals, competence profile and assessment criteria in a community-based setting.
